"We are celebrating our seventh year and to date we have raised over $25,000. We are funding 70 scholarships, including uniforms, daily lunch and school materials, which means 70 kids will have a better life because of you!" says Margarita Martin, President and Founder of the Colombo-American Education Foundation. As a native of Colombia herself, Margarita has a special concern for this cause.

Mac MacKenzie is Obliterating 2007 Volume Goals

Mac Mackenzie

While some claim the housing market has taken a turn for the worst, Mac MacKenzie and his seasoned support team are enjoying their finest hour yet. The Mackenzie Advantage Team has seen more than their share of market mayhem and concerned clients, but that hasn't stopped them from selling an impressive 88 homes already this year. Mac Mackenzie of Coldwell Banker Irvine recently took the time to answer some questions regarding his recent observations and thoughts about the current market.

What trends have you noticed among potential home buyers?

I keep listening to the media, researching unemployment reports and staying abreast of what's going on in the world, and we're seeing that at least a third of our clients are not economically sound. We've had a lot of questions about why we've been able to move so much product. Candidly, it's because the homeowners are listening to us.

In a slowing market, with homeowners likely to feel panicked, aggravated or out of control, how do you convince homeowners to listen to your advice?

The most difficult part about getting someone to listen is getting them to understand where the truth is. The biggest problem that we're faced with is the contradiction from other people in our industry. Some agents are so excited about getting a listing that they forget that they've got to sell it.

We educate [clients] as to what has been happening, what could happen worst case, what could happen best case ... and then I want them to make the decision for themselves. When you talk to people like that, they have a tendency to open up.

How can buyers and sellers remain in touch with the reality of our current market?

As sellers, they are going to have to face up to the truth. They are going to have to realize that you never get mad at your agent when he comes and tells you that you have to take the price up. You've got to remember that markets go up and down.

The homeowners must focus on the fact that the markets change. What doesn't change, or shouldn't change, is how you're going to deal with it. That's tough, because when you're losing, you're angry, and when you're winning, you're happy.
